I'm Evan Nappen.

Teddy Nappen 00:20
and I'm Teddy Nappen.

Evan Nappen 00:23
And welcome to Gun Lawyer. So, as we go down the path of Second Amendment victories and as gun bans are falling and will continue to fall, I'm sure, outright bans, and as we see expansion of our rights federally dramatically, with elimination of 90% of NFA registration requirements, and what used to take literally nine months to a year waiting for paperwork, now in free states, you can obtain a silencer or a short-barrel rifle, short-barrel shotgun, or an AOW virtually with an instant check and a 4473. You're able to, even for your own personal use in free states, make these things, believe it or not, without having to do the forms for your personal use there. It's amazing what has happened, and the Second Amendment oppression lobby understands this, of course. They're going to look for alternative methods of screwing with us.

Evan Nappen 01:46
And one of the key ways that they are going to push is by creating unbelievably excessive bureaucracy in permitting systems, and there is no better example than New York's carry permit application and process. Now, let me tell you, New Jersey is bad. No question. Massachusetts is bad. There's a number of states. You know, Maryland isn't a walk in the park either. All right. I mean, there's a number of states that are just pain in the ass, but nothing comes close to the absurdity that is New York City carry permit. I'm going to go through with you what is involved in getting a New York City carry. Then after you get it, you are restricted because all of Times Square is a is a sensitive place that you can't carry there, like the heart of New York, where you'd most likely want to go. You can't have it on a bus. You can't have it on a subway. You can't have it on a train. I mean, it's crazy. It's virtually useless in the city. It's so unbelievably restricted, and of course they're looking to abuse sensitive places to invalidate the validity of permits. his is what New York did. They tried appealing it and going up to the Supreme Court, which did not grant cert on the challenge on New York City's sensitive places.

Evan Nappen 03:40
Now we have a nice victory in a number of sensitive place challenges in the Koons decision, and we're waiting for the Third Circuit in New Jersey to render its en banc opinion, which I'm cautiously optimistic is going to be really great regarding sensitive places. And that may set the stage for that challenge. But nonetheless, the application process will absolutely be the focus to red tape our rights to death. Let me review with you what New York non-resident required documents and what they will require of you in not just answering an unbelievable amount of intrusive questions that really are arguably just completely irrelevant to anything doing with a gun.

Teddy Nappen 04:40
Just to be clear. This is for pretend. You're an out-of-state individual trying to apply to the state, to the state of New York. This is what is required. What they just, they post it on their website. They make it very clear these are the hoops and pitfalls that they set up to try to get their in.

Evan Nappen 05:00
Right. So, number one, you have to have a valid state or federal photo ID. You're going to need proof of your date of birth, which keep in mind that's in addition to your valid state or federal photo ID, and your proof of birth can only be a birth certificate with a raised seal. Keep that in mind. A U.S. passport or a U.S. military card. Then you need to provide your Social Security card. This is a copy of your social security card, not just the number. Then you have to provide proof of citizenship. Now, keep in mind, every one of these documents you're going to have to have ready to upload. Proof of citizenship. You can have a passport, a birth certificate, naturalization documents, or alien registration card.

Evan Nappen 06:03
If you resided in the U.S. for less than seven years, you must submit a certificate of good conduct or equivalent. Proof of residence in which you must provide either a lease agreement, electric or gas bill, cable or internet, or landline telephone. Keep that in mind. Landline telephone. Who even has them? Then you must provide a DMV, Division of Motor Vehicles, Lifetime Abstract. Every single Motor vehicle traffic ticket you've ever received in your life must be provided to New York. What does some speeding ticket from 30 years ago have to do with getting a gun permit? It doesn't matter. You have to provide that Lifetime Abstract, which, by the way, is $15 from NJ Motor Vehicle. You'll have to get that and get it sent to you and get it before you do this. All right.

Evan Nappen 07:16
You're going to need an affidavit of cohabitant form, notarized, unless you live alone, then just sign it. One form per household member. One form if you live alone, and then it has to be notarized. hen you need a New York PD safeguard firearms form where you agree to safeguard your firearms, and a copy of their state ID or driver's license. And this safeguard firearm form is an individual you have to identify who can take control of your gun if you're not able to, and they have to provide this form. So, it's not just dependent on you. You now have to involve all these other people in your application. Then four character reference letters. Each one must be notarized by the person writing the letter. The references must be lawful U.S. residents. No relatives. All this is going to have to be up uploaded now. Copies of all other firearm licenses and permits held from any of the 50 states. You'll have to list all of the permits you currently hold with the effective dates and issue dates, and include a PDF or image uploaded of all licenses. And if you have a New Jersey Firearm ID card, you need to make up an expiration date because there are many of them issued that don't have an expiration date, as the system requires an expiration date.

Teddy Nappen 09:26
Well, when we were explaining, what you write, what you write is your date, and then the year 2099, effectively, like.

Evan Nappen 09:33
Right, because that's the max, which is absurd.

Teddy Nappen 09:36
Yes.

Evan Nappen 09:36
Then you need proof of completion of New York's 18-hour, get a load of that, 18-hour CCW training course. It must be administered by a duly authorized instructor pursuant to New York law. It includes 16 hours of classroom instruction and two hour of live fire, and it must be no less than six months old prior to the submission of your application. Then you have to do an affirmation of understanding of New York Penal Law Article 35 265 and Article 400. Then, military discharge papers, if it's applicable. If you served with the U.S. Armed Forces, you must submit a separate DD 214 and your discharge papers.

Evan Nappen 10:40
Arrest information. You must submit all of the following for each arrest: criminal court summons, oath summons, or transit adjudication bureau summons. Certificate of Disposition from the court with a raised seal showing the offense and disposition of the charges, certificate of relief from disabilities if your conviction or guilty plea for a felony or serious offense, as defined in New York penal law, has been given relief from disabilities, a detailed written statement describing the circumstances surrounding each arrest or summons, not even just conviction, anything. You must do this even if the case was dismissed and the record sealed, or the case nullified by operation of law. How they can require expunged records is beyond me.

Evan Nappen 11:46
Domestic incident report statement: Submit a statement pertaining to each domestic incident in which you were involved, which was reported to the police. So it's every report, not just that you got a restraining order and it got dismissed. No. Any report. You're going to have to know that took place and be able to explain it. You must include a description of the incident, the date of the address, the names of people involved and their relationship to you, order of protection, if applicable. So, if you have a copy of the order protection, all named parties, you're going to have to do a detailed written statement on that. Processing times: 18-hour CCW course. Keep in mind, it's valid for six months. The application submitted via the portal, $340 for the privilege of doing this insanity, and you have to get fingerprinted, of course, on top of it. This is a 17-page application, folks. It's nuts, absolutely.

Teddy Nappen 13:08
There's one that caught my eye, Dad. That's probably the worst of it all. You have to take photos of your firearm, photos of the serial number, and photos of the lockbox, and outside receipt showing you own that lockbox, and showing that you own it. And if you bought it on Amazon, you have to type I own the gun box and I purchased it on Amazon and it is in my home." You have to give photos of where you are putting the firearms. So, you know, anyone who watches Lockpick Lawyer, they're gonna get your gun. Like that's ridiculous.

Evan Nappen 13:51
And all this to get it, you can see, folks. This is what they're going to do, and you can well see them trying to create an application of this magnitude to possess and get a license for a so-called assault firearm. You can see them doing this across the board, particularly in you know anti-gun, anti-Second Amendment oppression states. It's just outrageously wrong, and we need to be vigilant about this. Because this will get sold to the public as just, oh, we just require a license. It's reasonable. We just need a license, right? And it's absolutely an evil rights-crushing process. What you have to supply to New York is essentially worse than becoming a law enforcement officer as to what you'd have to provide. It's probably more than what's needed to get Top Secret clearance. I mean, it's insanity here with this, and yet, they get away with it. That licensing process is the current process. Then when you get it, you face sensitive place restrictions. It's essentially how to prohibit and ban without officially calling it a ban. And that's after Bruen.

Teddy Nappen 15:33
Now I want this, and I like your point to it. Imagine applying this to voting.

Evan Nappen 15:41
Imagine. Right! Imagine applying this, imagine applying it to immigration.

Teddy Nappen 15:49
Yeah, yeah.

Teddy Nappen 15:53
New York would vote red for the rest of its life, just for the utterance.

Evan Nappen 15:56
I'll tell you what. How about how about you know.

Teddy Nappen 16:00
Fair trades?

Evan Nappen 16:01
That states that have legal abortion, you have to do this before you can get an abortion. Think that would be fine with those states? I mean, how about before you can make a post and do anything with freedom of speech? I mean, this is sick.

Teddy Nappen 16:19
How about apply this to same-sex marriage couples that try to adopt children. Oh, that would maybe avoid a lot of the issues that have been coming out recently with you know that recent couple that adopted the child and they're running a pedophile ring. Like, they will do this for one thing, the Second Amendment. They will apply it. They'll never apply this to any, and they'll never apply the standard. But the damage that is done with voting, with everything else, they're fine with. But the one thing, because it's just so Marxist.

Evan Nappen 16:53
Oh, let's talk about their argument against the Save Act. They claim that you know, hey, minorities can't somehow produce an ID. Imagine if this process in New York was the requirement to vote? Imagine that. It would be outrageous. I wouldn't ever want to see that as requirements for voting. I'm fine with an ID, of course. I'm fine with the proposals in the Save Act, but imagine trying to make this the requirement for voting. It's absolutely unbelievable, and of course, it's going to take more of Supreme Court work to go at this and be prepared. Our best bet is to vigorously oppose and fight it as we can when opposed legislatively.

Teddy Nappen 17:55
I will say at least they've gone so far because it's so blatant. They just think they can get away with this. I'm glad they do that.

Evan Nappen 18:05
And so far, they are.

Teddy Nappen 18:05
Yeah, it's very easy for us to show to the court this is unreasonable because of the amount of hoops and leggings you have to go through to obtain this, as opposed to many other states that are even less strict, but still up there.

Evan Nappen 18:21
The problem is not even New York's federal circuit court is Second Amendment oppression. I mean, to uphold sensitive places in New York where an entire geographic section of a city, the entire geographic section of Times Square and etc., is a sensitive place. I mean, that is crazy that that could be. They could just take a swath of land and make it a gun-free, you know, zone.

Teddy Nappen 19:04
Yeah, and by the way, it that also covers public transport and transit. So, good luck getting on a subway, all forms of that. Parks, playground, entertainment gatherings, licensed alcohol and cannabis establishments, libraries, polling, shelters. So, if there's a homeless guy with a tent out there, can't carry around that spot. Like, it's this is just they're legislating. They're trying to add every single. Okay, fine. You can have your carry. You just can't use it. It's right up there with whenever someone is in a self-defense shooting in these blue states, they will go after you tooth and nail and try to get you for murder. They're like, fine, you can have your carry, but we're gonna put you through the ringer and make sure we can put you in jail for the rest of your life. So, if you ever use that gun, it's disgusting.

Evan Nappen 19:57
Absolutely, and the New York Times Square gun-free sensitive zone, is 34 to 36 city blocks. That's how big it is. 34 to 36 city blocks in the heart of Midtown Manhattan. It stretches 13 blocks north to south. From West 40th up to West 53rd, and spans two to three long avenues east to west. From Sixth Avenue to Eighth or Ninth Avenue. It creates a perimeter covering approximately 150 to 160 acres of land in New York City. Outrageous! And at one point, it extended to the Diamond District. They took so much heat over that that they pulled it back. So, at least in the Diamond District, folks there could still have a firearm. You know, they're only protecting diamonds. I mean, come on, right? But still, this is nuts. So, you go through this entire thing, still prohibited from that, still prohibited on other sensitive places, which

which is

Evan Nappen 21:38
yeah,

Teddy Nappen 21:39
I'll even go a step further. That okay, cool. The diamond walkers are good for that one street line, except can't use any public transport, can't use any form of vehicle. Like, it's ridiculous. Well, here.

Evan Nappen 21:52
Not only you blocked geographically, you're blocked from government buildings, administrative offices, and courthouses, education, and child care. So, all the schools, healthcare facilities, all hospitals, mental health facilities, and other licensed medical care, places of worship, churches, synagogues, mosques, other houses of worship, public transit infrastructure, subways, subway cars, busses, and related public transit facilities, public parks, playgrounds, zoos, and public libraries, entertainment and gathering venues, right? All that in Times Square, sporting arenas, gaming entertainment venues, substance and assemblies-you know, alcohol, cannabis-consuming places, polling places, shelters-all the, all this. So, their idea is make it unbelievably difficult to get, and then when you get it, virtually useless. And so, hey, we're not banning the issuance of it. We're just making it impossible to have any value in use, and this is where the courts are going to have to step in and go after them. We're seeing even the DOJ taking on New Jersey. As we talked about, going after Pennsauken's' egregious procedures, and others are, I'm sure within their sights for misbehavior, and making examples is important. But this is what we have to be very much aware of in the future.

Teddy Nappen 23:35
The other thing is, and I always hear the Left talk about, you know, oh, you're just trying to make a poll tax. Like whenever they do it, like try to state going on that front. What do you call this? Where let's just say for the poor minorities that they are always so much about wanting to defend, how are they ever going to get a way to defend themselves?

Evan Nappen 23:55
I'll tell you what. I'll tell you what. Here's the deal. Just with voting alone in New York, we won't even require any of this insane application process. We're just going to charge $340 to vote. That's the only thing we're going to do. How about that? Would they be okay with that? $340 to vote. Fair enough? You do it on guns, on the right to carry. I guess we could do it on voting, too, right? $340 bucks. Why not? Oh, oh. Who would that discourage from voting? I'm sorry. Who might that discourage? So, when you really look at it, just the fee alone makes this as elitist as can be. This is an elitist license. Even if you're willing to go through all of the insanity to get it.

Teddy Nappen 24:51
Prior to Bruin, what was the amount you could pay for the super elites? It was like five grand to get the carry, and it would just be well.

Evan Nappen 25:00
That was the alleged bribe that it took back in the old days, but that was that was money that was worth more to you know in those days than even today. There was a whole big scandal over there about licensing and corruption, and you can check on that and how that all went down.

Evan Nappen 25:20
But I also want to mention another quasi-concern as we get more amazing in technology. In so many ways, it can be beneficial. In other ways, it becomes quite controversial. So, they have been able to train AI now to detect concealed handguns using Wi-Fi signals. (https://www.tomshardware.com/tech-industry/artificial-intelligence/researchers-train-ai-to-detect-concealed-handguns-using-wi-fi-signals-open-source-wifirenet-achieves-precision-detection-on-older-802-11a-standard-by-analyzing-how-weapons-distort-wireless-signals) This open-source WifireNet achieves precision detection on older 802.11A standard by analyzing how weapons distort wireless signals.

Evan Nappen 26:01
So, the Wi-Fi that's everywhere can now be used as a tool to identify weapons being carried. Now, of course, if it's legal, which it is, and you have permits in permit areas and constitutional carry in other areas, are they still going to use this type of thing to stop, question, target just individuals that are carrying? Or is it only going to be you know focused in terms of providing security to a building or something where firearms are not allowed? No, I mean this looks like it's taking on the same dimension, if you will, as flock cameras are for privacy. And so, as we see the advance of AI and we see the advance of these technologies, flock, face recognition, Wi-Fi identification, you start to see our privacy and personal security being challenged and subjected to immense intrusion by way of these emerging technologies. So, this is another thing we've got to balance. And I'm sure these Second Amendment oppressionists are cooking up schemes to utilize this and create abilities to do automatic stop and frisk to make sure anyone who's identified carrying can immediately prove that they're lawfully carrying. You know where you have to immediately disclose, and the officer stops you, and you have to immediately tell them and show them. Now you're being harassed just for carrying, and these are all kinds of games that we could imagine they're going to play, and we're going to need to get laws in place across the board protecting our privacy from these intrusions.

Teddy Nappen 28:01
I guess, in my view, and this would be a question to Dad regarding, because you we have when it comes out in the public, where you have the you know this will be private businesses, will it be people that are wanting to put up these you know gun-free zone? They'll have the little camera tracking and determining that. Is there a way to stop that access because this would be up there with someone having just.

Evan Nappen 28:25
Well we're gonna have to, we're gonna have to get guns treated the same as other civil rights, where discrimination based on race also is the same for discrimination based on somebody lawfully carrying a gun. Until we get it established in that same regard, establishments will exercise their property rights to you know public establishments where they can say no guns as a private property whole possessor, in the same way they can say, "Hey, we don't want any dogs in here, or we don't want anyone with bare feet", or whatever. They use that and say no guns. But if they put up a sign that said "No blacks allowed, that would be completely illegal, and it would be civil rights as well. It should be, and that would be no go. We need to get our Second Amendment rights in that same category of protection. Until that happens, we're subject to these other restrictions from private parties like that.

Teddy Nappen 29:36
Here's the other dangerous thing, just to give you an example. I remember it was the previous AG for New Jersey where they were ran a program that would basically give them the "no guns allowed" signs. They would just hand them out to businesses and you would. So, now take it a step further. I'm New Jersey. I tell my AG, hey, we're going to run a program where, we're gonna pay businesses to have this camera with this AI to track and monitor, looking for anyone who's carrying.

Evan Nappen 30:08
It could happen.

Teddy Nappen 30:09
On that front, and it's just a free stipend. We'll pay you to have this thing.

Evan Nappen 30:15
I can see it happen.

Teddy Nappen 30:17
This is where, what comes next?

Evan Nappen 30:19
Or just Wi-Fi and a flock camera right outside the door. It's a public street that they're watching. And Wi-Fi, and AI does a detection, and all it takes is that to be regarded as probable cause to at least conduct a search and pat down and prove lawful possession. You can see this.

Teddy Nappen 30:43
Would have to be expanded?

Teddy Nappen 30:46
Could we take it? I guess it would be a Supreme Court on the Fourth Amendment, like search and seizure.

Evan Nappen 30:50
Well, the Fourth Amendment would come into play as well as the Second Amendment. Both would come into play, and how that gets sorted out. You know, these are the pathways, and if you think about it, the Second Amendment oppressors look for every angle. They abused consumer protection laws to try to sue, you know, Glock and Sig out of existence, and others. So, they abuse that. They abuse domestic violence in terms of completely relating it to gun seizures, gun searches, taking guns. Even though guns are not involved in the vast majority of DV incidents. It doesn't matter. They got on board with that. So, every angle they can see to tie in. Healthcare. It's a healthcare cost. Get doctors questioning about it. We get them. You know, they look for every angle, and the new technologies are going to give them their future gambits at harming our rights. They are essentially the enemy. They're the enemy of our rights. They're the enemy of the Second Amendment, and our enemies are very clever. They're going to take advantage in every way they can. We have to be ready for it, and not be taken by ambush or surprise. And when we see these things being proposed, we fight them and jump on it. Be ready to litigate if necessary and fight legislatively. Very, very important.

Evan Nappen 32:36
Hey, let me tell you about our friends at WeShoot. This week at WeShoot, they have some really cool stuff. They have the Orthos Arms Joker, the Joker Other. It's bold, aggressive, and anything but ordinary. This Joker isn't playing around. Check out the Joker Other. They have the Ruger RXM, where Ruger has teamed up with Magpul to bring fresh innovation, modularity, and impressive value to this striker-fired pistol world, and the Bull Armory Cherokee, Israeli engineering, proven design and craftsmanship that helped build Bull Armory's reputation. You can check out all these at We Shoot, which is an indoor range conveniently located in Lakewood, New Jersey. Simple to get to, right from the Parkway. It is a great resource for Central Jersey, to have a great place to shoot with a great pro shop and fantastic folks for training. Like we said, Teddy and I got our training. We got our New York State, Maryland, New Jersey, all certificates for carry all there. You can get yours as well, and so much more. They offer tremendous courses and training.

Evan Nappen 34:00
Also, you can check out Shannon Leo, who joins the Many Faces of 2A. They have great photography, professional photography at WeShoot. You can check them out online at WeShootUSA.com, and you can see Shannon there, always smiling, always positive, spreading good vibes wherever she goes. She is there to remind us that the 2A community is about much more than firearms. It's about wonderful people, lasting friendships, and families, and that's what helps make WeShoot special. It really does. And with Shannon around, even the targets can't keep a straight face. And I will tell you, check out that WeShoot website. weshootusa.com You'll be impressed. These Jokers are really cool. I'm liking what I'm seeing. There's also an Ortho Arms Joker 12 gauge platform. Looks took kind of a tactical shotgun and gave it an AR-inspired makeover. They have the Joker Gray with an 11-inch barrel. The Joker Holt works Elite. It's a custom finish, contrasting tones, and a Joker woodland camo elite. They're classified as others, rather than conventional shoulder stock shotguns. These are three jokers, three personalities, but one seriously unusual family, that's for sure, of 12 gage firearms. So, check them out at WeShoot. Go to weshootusa.com. Make sure you visit. You'll be glad you did. This is the range for Central Jersey, and it can be your range as well. Make sure you pay a visit.

Evan Nappen 35:50
Let me also shamelessly promote my book, New Jersey Gun Law. The Bible of New Jersey Gun Law. I was just talking with a fellow who gave me a call. He was thanking me for what he read in the book and how it saved him. he book saves a lot of people. That's why I wrote it. It'll help you from becoming a GOFU when you really need it. So, go to EvanNappen.com and get your copy of New Jersey Gun Law, the Bible of Jersey Gun Law. It's over 500 pages, 120 topics, all question and answer. Scan the QR on the front cover and get your updates. We do the updates for free. Also, make sure you read it and never lend it because if you do, you won't get it back. I hear that all the time.

Evan Nappen 36:51
Hey, Teddy, what do you have for us in Press Checks?

Teddy Nappen 36:58
Well, as you know, Press Checks are always free. I always love how much the Left have to justify themselves, even when reality sets in. I remember hearing this term: it's affirming the delusion. The idea of like no, it's that meme of the of the guy from Simpsons, the principal who's like, "Have I lost touch?" And then he thinks about, "No, no, it's the children, not me." And it always comes back to that whenever, for like whenever it's shown to be like. No, no, actually, gun control doesn't actually stop mass shootings, and all these things that we do actually don't stop crime. Cut to The Trace. Everyone's favorite local propagandist talking about why mass shootings happen in states with the strictest gun laws. (https://www.thetrace.org/2026/10/strict-gun-laws-prevent-gun-violence/) Dad, I was wondering about this question for so long. Why does that happen? All these things that they have. These wonderful things. These Red Flags.

Evan Nappen 38:07
How come all these great gun laws and all this, and yet, for some reason, they don't stop killers. They don't stop people bent on committing violent assaults, murder, and rape. So why? Why? Why? Why are the? Why don't the gun laws work? Well, I'm sure the reason is pro-gun states, right? Pro-Second Amendment states, right? They're to blame.

Teddy Nappen 38:31
It's one of those, but I love how. So, it starts off with the shooting that happened in Oregon, where one of the strictest gun control states. They get like an A plus rating from their whole anti-gun groups. They have the toughest, strictest gun laws out there, and of course the shooting took place. It was a 16-year old who open fired on an elementary school. Killed three children, critically wounded two others. I love how the article completely ignores the fact that a good guy with a gun, who violated the gun-free zone, went out with his 40 and took him out. They don't even mention that. It says 40. They don't. I looked on line. So, everyone buy their 40s. But the point being, I love the propaganda. They're telling on themselves right there by avoiding the one critical bit. Oh, wait. A good guy with a gun, with a carry, who went on to a gun free zone. Oh, man. I really hope they prosecute him for violating that gun free zone and stopping a mass shooter.

Evan Nappen 39:37
Unbelievable. Their argument, though, about the free states causing the problem for the unfree communist states is absurd. Because if that's the case, how come the free states aren't the ones with the problems? Because there's so many guns wouldn't there'll be way more gun problems? But that's not how it plays out, is it?

Teddy Nappen 40:05
This has already been disproven by the fact that the guns that they use ones on that end that they say the iron pipeline. That was the whole push that they tried to make where even.

Evan Nappen 40:15
Always make up some type of catchphrase.

Teddy Nappen 40:18
Crowder even disproved that when they were trying to go to like saying like you could go to Arizona and buy the gun. He would go to shops and then say, oh, can I? I need to buy this gun now. Well, no, you can't do that. And it goes the whole thing. So, the argument of just going to some shop in another state is ridiculous. You have to get it transferred. All that.

Evan Nappen 40:41
You have to pass the NICS check, too.

Teddy Nappen 40:43
Yeah, all these things they ignore.

Evan Nappen 40:46
And you have to be a resident for a handgun.

Teddy Nappen 40:49
Yeah, but continuing on.

Evan Nappen 40:53
And they have to follow. And even if without, if they finally get rid of the residency requirement, the dealer would still have to obey the law of both the home state and the resident state. So, all the brouhaha about NFA and you know the pearl clutching going on by the anti-Second Amendment crowd, the truth of it is, all that's being eliminated is excess bureaucracy. I mean, really, when you boil it down. Because you're still getting a NICS check, and it's still being done on a 4473. So, what is the big deal? Why have NFA essentially became obsolete with the NICS check and the '68 Gun Control Act creating the 4473 system on firearms. So, what is even the point of NFA? Other than to be a roadblocking hassle to make it more difficult? And that's why that should not apply to something that is our right.

Yeah, and the thing that always. love how they write this article. It's like many gun rights advocates meanwhile argue that states strong gun laws, including universal background check, red flag law, ghost gun bans, didn't prevent the shooting. Do gun rights advocates have a point? First thing, while research has shown the states with loosest gun laws and the highest and the highest rates of gun ownership have the highest rates of gun death, pause right there. All these states that they always cut to the red states. Where's the mass shooting and all the big shootings happening from? Oh, it's the blue and on cities that are Democrat strongholds that run with the wait with the open door policy of letting criminals out on the street and with yeah the no cash bail. This they always love to throw that line in of like loose gun laws of these, and then you highlight to like, oh, where did all the shootings happen? Oh, these blue controlled areas, amazing.

Teddy Nappen 43:05
But continue, as however, and this is where they tell themselves: eight of the deadly mass shootings have included California, Oregon, Washington, according to the gun violence archives. States routinely earning top scores. How could this be? And then I love how this they tell on themselves immediately with public mass shootings represent less than 1% of gun violence in this country, said New Jersey's Gun Violence Research Center. Oh, so gun mass shootings aren't that big of a deal, and it's not that.

Evan Nappen 43:36
Less than one percent.

Teddy Nappen 43:37
Mass problem that the.

Evan Nappen 43:39
Yeah, and that's with them expanding their definition of what is a mass shooting. Remember their definition is not hundreds and hundreds of people. What is it? Two, three, or more?

Teddy Nappen 43:50
Three, three. I believe it's three people.

Evan Nappen 43:52
Three people. Which look, by the way, is a concern. But calling three people a mass shooting? You know, it envisions crowds of people being mowed down, you know.

Teddy Nappen 44:03
Yeah and separate out the gang-related crimes which they incorporate in. When it comes to the deadly killing of children.

Evan Nappen 44:12
And suicide.

Teddy Nappen 44:14
More people die by the Canadian maid program than the.

Evan Nappen 44:19
You know, you're not kidding. They just said over 100,000 euthanasia killings by Canada. Over 100,000 people put to death by their Government in allowing them, what they're calling assisted suicide. But in fact, it just is essentially saving medical costs where the people are virtually convinced to take their life.

Teddy Nappen 44:49
Well, take it a step further. It's how we clear the residents and the natural born people, and we import the third world into the country. We get them to vote our way, and that's the game.

Evan Nappen 45:01
Yeah, we don't want older people that remember how it used to be. How it used to be free. How it used to be really good. You don't want that. We've got to stomp that out, and if we can convince them to kill themselves, all the better. I mean it's about as evil as it gets.

Teddy Nappen 45:16
Yeah. Well, I mean, it goes back to the Soviet style.

Evan Nappen 45:20
You know, we're talking about. No, it's the Soviet style exactly. But I want to say, with all the technology and things going on with these advances, that is really what this week's GOFU is. Because the GOFU is the Gun Owner Fuck Up, and you don't want to be a GOFU. So, you can learn expensive lessons of others for free. And here's where I want to make it clear. Do NOT post online what you have acquired. Avoid doing that. Because all that gets data-based, memory hold. It becomes something that can be brought up later by all kinds of individuals. They want to make allegations, make false claims. Avoid posting your newest prized guns. Avoid doing that because this can be used against you in a multitude of ways legally. We see it invoked in terms of Red Flags. They'll say, "oh, look, he posted a picture of this gun, and Red Flag. He posted a picture of the gun, and then they'll say, "he pointed that gun, and they describe it from the picture. Then they claim that they saw you with it, and they can describe it because it's posted. Or it leads to registration of confiscation and different Government activities. So, please, folks, keep your purchases as private as you can. Never show serial numbers. Never let that go into the internet. There's crawlers that grab all that info and secure it and store it.

Evan Nappen 47:08
This is Evan Nappen and Teddy Nappen reminding you that gun laws don't protect honest citizens from criminals. They protect criminals from honest citizens.
